Continuity of endeavor

We have been able to bring forth the tenth volume of our campus journal “Academic Voices”. We are pleased that the previous issues of this journal have widely received appreciation from different corners. This volume includes twelve articles from various streams: Science, Education, Management, Humanities and Social Sciences.

We appreciate the efforts made by the authors who repeatedly revised their manuscripts in accordance with comments given by the reviewers and the editorial board. We are extremely sorry for excluding a couple of manuscripts that could not meet the academic rigor required by the journal. We would like to thank the patron and the campus research committee of this campus for their valuable suggestions and support to bring this journal to your hand. The views expressed in these articles are the views of respective contributors and therefor neither the campus nor the editorial team is responsible for any breach.

Finally, the editorial team expects healthy comments for improving the quality and content of the journal in upcoming volumes.
