Editorial

This is our great pleasure to write few words for the new Journal – Journal of Biomedical Sciences. Aim of this journal is to promote research activities among the biological science researchers, physicians through the Internet. We aspire to concentrate in the developing countries doctors, scientists who gather experiences of different types of disease which is rare for developed countries. There are significant advancements in the field of Biological Sciences, Medical, Dental, Nursing and Allied health sciences during the past few years. Apart from the better health care management; treatment in an improved way, even its impact can be seen in research in biological and medical sciences of different countries.

We have launched JBS to bring out all these scientific activities under an umbrella, so that advancements in these areas can be published in one journal and as it is a free open access journal, so availability of full text for all. Advancements in biological science, and health sciences field is growing in a faster way, where information technology plays a vital role. Computer and internet is helping people for sharing valuable information's, advancements in biomedical fields. Keeping all this things in mind we started our journal as online to provide a free of cost access from any part of the world. We desire to make JBS one of the best journals in Asia, by following strictly the guidelines of scientific write up, ethical & other issues.

Our editorial members trying their best to make this journal best. Quality, transparency of research and journal policy, by giving the importance of protocols. We also consider submissions of randomized trials only if it is registered. Due to busy schedule, this is difficult for physicians and scientists to spare time for writing a research article. Keeping all this in mind, we offers a variety of several other assistance services which includes - peer review, proof reading, setting up of the bibliography, and English language improvement.

Our purpose is to assist, so that they can also share their practical experiences in this publishing platform. This is our determination to make it as one of the best journals in Asia with everybody's whole hearted effort, valuable suggestions, legal and financial assistance. Your contribution in the future issues will make our journal best in the field of biomedical sciences. Our journal and its services are not allied to any pharmaceutical or other company. It is a philanthropic whole hearted effort by NHRWS.

We are expressing our gratitude to the many people whose blessings, active participation and support make our journal to come up with a novel vision. Lastly we must thank our parents, teachers and colleagues who encouraged starting Journal of Biomedical Sciences.
