We are pleased to bring out the fifth volume of Journal of NELTA, Surkhet in your hands. The purpose of this Journal is to reflect the issues and practices of English Language Teaching in the EFL context. This issue provides support and resources to the researchers and teachers as well as ELT students. NELTA Surkhet has been conducting the training sessions and sharing many programmes inviting the experts from home and abroad. This is the fifth volume NELTA Surkhet has produced in its history to share the professional practices in our ELT classrooms incorporating the global issues with local reality. Journal of NELTA Surkhet is academic publication of NELTA Surkhet aimed at professional development of teachers teaching English at different levels from pre-primary to tertiary level. We hope it can be the common forum for all the NELTA colleagues to share their classroom problems with reference to the theoretical notions related to ELT. This volume includes articles that deal with wide range of issues concerning learning and researching English language teaching in Nepal. It has been able to address current issues and debates in Nepalese ELT context. This volume deals with the various topics; Dialogue journals in an ESL writing class, Test-teach-test method, Multilingual education, Maxim of order, Recorded materials in EFL class, Literature course in ELT curriculum, Mother tongue education, Reading and learning, Critical incidents, Global language, ELT in globalization world, and A book review. We hope the articles of this journal will contribute to expand the horizon of ELT practitioners in our context. We are grateful to the writers who provided their valuable time and expertise while preparing, revising and even rewriting their theoretical and research articles published in this journal. We hope to get such constructive and academic works in the days to come as well to uplift the ELT situation in our context. We will try our best to continue and improve the publication in the coming volume. We hope that you will enjoy reading the articles and try yourself to produce your own works to share with all other colleagues. NELTA Surkhet welcomes and encourages such creative hands to materialize their efforts and bring them out into publication.

Thank you for deciding to read Journal of NELTA Surkhet.
Thank You.
