

Editorial

Welcome to this first edition of Journal of Agriculture and Resource Management (JARM), is a annual, double-blind peer-reviewed, open-access multidisciplinary journal published by the Research Management Committee (RMC), School of Agriculture, Far Western University, Tikapur, Nepal. This journal provides a platform for the researchers, and academicians across the world to share knowledge from different disciplines including Agriculture, Veterinary, Fishery, Forestry and Social Sciences.

This first volume consists of fifteen articles from, ranges from Agriculture Science, and related subjects. Journal certainly will help the policy makers, planners, curriculum designers, academicians, experts and new scholars of the field.

JARM adopts a rigorous process of screening, reviewing, editing and proofreading. The editorial board makes the first decision; board can reject the articles if they do not meet the author guidelines and accepted articles are sent to anonymous reviewers for review. If the reviewers recommend the article for publication with some feedback, the reviewed articles are sent back to the concerned authors to revise addressing the comments and feedback of the reviewers. Finally, the editorial board makes the decision whether to publish the revised article or reject. All the expenses are born by the School of Agriculture, Far Western University, Tikapur, Nepal.

We express our graditute to Bishnu Bilas Adhikari (PhD), Dean, Faculty of Agriculture; Mr. Sushil Nyaupane, Head of School, School of Agriculture. We thank the young and energetic team of RMC, School of Agriculture for giving the opportunity to collaborate in this academic work. We express our sincere gratitude to all the authors for their contribution. We are thankful to our valued reviewers for their scholarly work and support to the Editorial Team throughout the process. We will heartily appreciate and welcome comments and suggestions for the improvements in the next issue from the valued readers.
