

Editorial Message

It gives us great pleasure to introduce this inaugural edition of the Journal of Insurance Studies in South Asia (JISSA), a platform dedicated to fostering insurance knowledge and development in the region. This milestone marks a significant step towards enriching the discourse on insurance practices, policies, and innovations, not only in Nepal but across South Asia.

The Journal of Insurance Studies in South Asia aspires to be a repository of scholarly articles, research findings, and thought leadership in the insurance sector. This initiative is a testament to our commitment to advancing the understanding of insurance and reinsurance dynamics, promoting professional excellence, and addressing emerging challenges in the industry.

We extend our heartfelt gratitude to the contributors, reviewers, and all stakeholders whose support has made this publication possible. The insights shared in this journal will undoubtedly serve as a valuable resource for academics, practitioners, and policymakers alike.

As we envision the continued growth of this journal, we are committed to publishing comprehensive editions focusing on critical developments in the insurance and reinsurance sectors. By featuring insights from distinguished thought leaders and industry experts, we aim to deliver premium research and practical knowledge that serves both regional and global insurance markets, with regular updates addressing emerging sector needs.

Susil Dev Subedi
Editor-in-Chief