The Editorial

This issue of Journal of Science and Technology – volume 4 issue 1 – has met two of the three objectives set during the publication of the previous issue. All the published articles have already been provided with DOIs and every future article will also contain its unique DOI on it. Now, Journal of Science and Technology, written JoST in short now on, also has its online presence with online ISSN, and thus, its print and online versions go hand-in-hand in every issue of JoST.

Apart from IT fields, we have been continuously receiving papers also from Civil Engineering and Social Science. So, readers will see articles being laid out in both IEEE and APA formats in this issue too. Collaborative works have been expanded to various universities, colleges, research institutions etc. so that more and more works done in the field of engineering sciences and normal sciences can be incorporated in the future issues of JoST. Commitment and efforts of reaching out to the greater research world have already been made and milestones will be visible and countable in near future.

Like in the previous issue, we feel thankful to all the authors, obliged to the reviewers and grateful to the JoST committee including the Publication Sub-Committee. We also thank every individual for their hard work and dedication in lifting the JoST one level up.

We thank you all!
